

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to a method for the exfoliation of skin, comprising applying to the skin a composition containing an effective amount of a phosphosugar. The invention also relates to a method for increasing glycosaminoglycan levels in skin, comprising applying to the skin a composition containing an effective amount of a phosphosugar. In a preferred embodiment, the phosphosugar is mannose-6-phosphate.